This is a well-written and complete article concerning chronic radiation proctopathy (CRP), namely the endoscopic therapy. There are several points that should be considered: ? This article is more suitable for an endoscopic journal, like the World Journal of Gastrointestinal Endoscopy ? There are several others (many) reviews published recently about this topic, namely a very recent one: Grodsky MB, Sidani SM. Radiation proctopathy. Clin Colon Rectal Surg. 2015; 28:103-11. Is there any need for another review article? ? Endoscopic dilation chapter should be removed, this is not a therapy for CRP but for complications.

Answer

- The article's theme was previously approved by the World Journal of Gastrointestinal Surgery editor. Each review has a different point of view. Endoscopic dilation part was removed.

- Thanks for your comments.
