

All patients were completely informed about the surgical procedure offered including potential advantages, probable complications and cost-benefit ratio and completed a written informed consent to participate in the study. The study protocol was approved by the Mashhad University of Medical Sciences' Ethics Committee.