Organization of future training in bariatric gastroenterology

Koch TR et al. Training in GI bariatrics

Timothy R Koch, Timothy R Shope, Christopher J Gostout

Abstract

A world-wide rise in the prevalence of obesity continues. This rise increases the occurrence of, risks of, and costs of treating obesity-related medical conditions. Diet and activity programs are largely inadequate for the long-term treatment of medically-complicated obesity. Physicians who deliver gastrointestinal care after completing traditional training programs, including gastroenterologists and general surgeons, are not uniformly trained in or familiar with available bariatric care. It is certain that
