In order to help more readers to find what they want to read in the shortest possible time, we have added a section known as 'Article Highlights', which will appear before the References section, in every paper published by the journals of the Baishideng Publishing Group. This new section will consist of summarized information on the research background, motivation, objectives, methods, results, conclusions, and perspectives; the subsections will be titled accordingly (e.g., Research background, Research motivation, etc.; see below). Author(s) should use plain language to highlight the core content of the article, with the best and the most important content described at the end of each paragraph.

- The article HIGHLIGHTS have been added

Please provide the PMID number, which is the serial number that roots the abstract for that publication into the PubMed index, and the CrossRef DOI® (Digital Object Identifier) name, which is a unique string created to identify a piece of scholarly content in the online environment for each reference in the References section.

- PMID number and DOI have been added
