Abstract

Castleman disease (CD) is a rare disorder of lymph nodes and related tissues, and generally occurs in the mediastinum, and cervical, retroperitoneal and axillary regions. The disease is classified into two major types: Unicentric CD (UCD) and multicentric CD (MCD). The occurrence of UCD in the retroperitoneal peripancreatic region is quite rare. We encountered two cases of retroperitoneal peripancreatic UCD in our hospital during the past three years. Following a series of medical examinations, including magnetic resonance imaging, computed tomography, ultrasonography and postoperative
