Dear Editor,

Here I am sending a language certificate letter. Before initial manuscript submission, our manuscript: ESPS Manuscript NO: 4649: Cytomegalovirus Enteritis with Jejunal Perforation in a Patient with Endometrial Adenocarcinoma: A Case Study and Review of Literature", received a professional English language editing through university English language editing service program. The e-mail from Science Editor, Editorial Office of WJCC requires a language certificate letter. However, the university service program is now on summer vacation. Therefore I can't receive a certificate letter from the service center.

So I received an English-language certificate from an English expert. He carefully read this manuscript and more improved English-language of our manuscript.

English-language expert:

Abdul Rehman, M.D.

I did publish more than 90 English-written papers including SCI or SCI-E. You can find out my publication list. I am an editorial member of WJCC. You did invite me as an editorial member of WJCC last year. I sent my C.V. including my publication list. In all processings of my paper submission to English-written journals, there was no problem in English of my manuscripts.

I believe that the language of our manuscript has reached Grade A and would like to sign as a guarantor.
