

Dear Reviewer 01220036,

Thank you very much for making the decision to accept my manuscript. As you said, this case is indeed a rarity. Spine tumors that occur during pregnancy are rare, and here we report the first case of anaplastic lymphoma kinase (ALK)+ anaplastic large cell lymphoma. The clinical manifestations of the patient are back pain and weakness of the lower limbs. These symptoms are easily mistaken for pregnancy. Therefore, we believe that the publication of this case will help orthopedic surgeons and obstetricians diagnose similar diseases as early as possible and promptly treat them.
