- The authors have reported the minute clinical and pathological information of their recent case and reviewed literatures of reported cases. The manuscript was well, concisely and coherently organized. Also, The figures are good but I prefer to add to histopathological slides high power of the alveolar damage. I recommend to accept this article.

Response: We appreciate for a thorough review of our manuscript and are grateful for the positive comment. We have included Figure 1d for higher power image of alveolar damage.

Reviewer #2

Conclusions supposed to reflect what exactly this particular case can give the reader.

Response: We appreciate for a thorough review of our manuscript and are grateful for the positive comment. We have modified the description in Conclusion (page 13, line 5 from the bottom).

Pulmonary tumor thrombotic microangiopathy (PTTM) is a rare condition in patients with hepatocellular carcinoma (HCC); to date, few cases have been reported. In this paper, they reported the clinical and pathological information of their recent case and reviewed literatures of reported cases to date. It is very interesting and I accept the existing versions.

Response: We appreciate for a thorough review of our manuscript and are grateful for the positive comment.
