SPECIFIC COMMENTS TO AUTHORS

I read with interest the article by Lakananurak and colleagues who did the study to investigate optimal hang time of two types of formula at standard room temperature and high temperature. This is a very interesting study, with a very current topic. No previous study has investigated hang time between standard room temperature and high temperature in enteral formulas, which is crucial for food safety of EN administration. This will potentially be of interest to a wide number of clinicians. However I also think the study has major shortage and needs some major changes that may help improving the manuscript: 1. "Materials and Methods" section, the details of the study method was poor, please report the methods in detail. 2. What type of infusion pump was used in this study? As some infusion pumps have heat preservation function which might influence results of the study. 3. "Statistical analysis" section was poor. Please report it in detail. 4. The study sample size was small, and only 20 species in total. In my opinion, the sample size need to increase. As small sample size might lead to big bias.
