Abstract

BACKGROUND

Paragonimiasis is a parasitic disease which has multiple symptoms, while pulmonary types are common. According to our clinical practices, the pleural effusion of our patients is full of fibrous contents. Drainage, praziquantel and triclabendazole are recommended for the treatment, but when fibrous contents contain in pleural effusion, surgical interventions are necessary. While none related reports have been reported. Herein, we presented a case of pulmonary paragonimiasis treated by thoracoscopy.
