Health-related quality of life after gastric cancer treatment in Brazil: Narrative review and reflections

Pinheiro RN et al. Health-related quality of life after gastric cancer treatment in Brazil

Abstract

In Brazil, gastric cancer is the third most common type of cancer among men and fifth among women, with an estimated 13,360 new cases among men and 7,870 among women each year during the 2020-2022 period.

This study presents reflections and attempts to add knowledge to the theme of quality of life (QoL) in patients with gastric adenocarcinoma and describes some of its characteristics in three regions of Brazil, with an evaluation of the disease's impacts in various dimensions of life, as reported by the patients themselves.
