SPECIFIC COMMENTS TO AUTHORS

The Article "A Rapidly Progressive Case of Adrenocorticotrophic Hormone-Secreting Pancreatic Neuroendocrine Carcinoma with Multiple Organ Infections and Widespread Thrombosis" describes a rare case of Ectopic adrenocorticotrophic hormone (ACTH)-secreting neuroendocrine tumor in combination with other diseases. In my opinion, such rare phenomenon's, like ACTH-secreting neuroendocrine tumors should be described in all possible ways that are available to the authors and published on an ongoing basis. Authors comprehensively approach the patient's medical examination and treatment, and discuss in detail the findings of other studies on the topic. I see no limitations in this article. The article is well written and in my opinion it is complete. Due to their rarity, the description of such cases is necessary to aggregate the information, which will ultimately lead to new discoveries in different areas of treatment of this problem.

SPECIFIC COMMENTS TO AUTHORS

This is a well-analyzed case report, but the following improvements need to be made:
The abstract and core tip of the manuscript needs to be condensed According CARE Checklist-2016, Key Words should including “case report” It is best to add this description to the summary of the medical history: the neuroendocrine carcinoma of the pancreas secreting ACTH has a poor immune state.
