Name of Journal: World journal of clinical cases Manuscript NO: 03035807 Manuscript Type: OPINION REVIEW This is an opinionated review on the novel 2019 coronavirus. The topic is as timely as it can be and the controversy here explained is of high impact. The paper itself is well written (although a few typos of bad use of English language – for which I advise professional language review), and provides a compilation of a social impact of this disease. Due to the novelty of this topic, some things have changed, including the naming of the virus. Please resource to the coronavirus study group at the ICTV for the correct terms (<https://www.biorxiv.org/content/10.1101/2020.02.07.937862v1.full.pdf>) Kind regards

Re-review comments (2020-02-19 00:59):

Although I can see improvements on the manuscript, I honestly feel the english language is still of poor quality. Several types of speeches are used in a miscellaneous fashion and this builds in generally week manuscript. Unless an english language native or a professional editing company proofreads the paper I cannot see my opinion changing favouribly.

This manuscript is far from being publishable in its current form and needs a huge revision. Please see my comments in the attached copy of the manuscript. All the statements made need appropriate references, and words such as "war" and "fight" should be avoided not to further increase the very stigma that the Authors say should be prevented. The Authors should also considerably expand the possible solutions to the issues mentioned and make "Possible solutions" a separate section.

Re-review comments (2020-02-17 18:39):

The Authors should distinguish the virus (that they should always mention as SARS-CoV-2) from the pneumonia caused by it (COVID-19). I had inserted SARS-CoV-2 in my suggested revision of the original submission but the Authors erroneously reverted back to their terminology.

The English language continues to be imperfect here and there, and needs further revision. Otherwise the manuscript is now acceptable.
