

This study was exempt from informed consent forms as the data was obtained from an anonymous clinical database; therefore, it would be impossible to identify the patients in order to ask permission. Patients were consented for data collection when they initiated treatment. The institutional Review Board reviewed the project and granted exemption.