Formatting Summary and Additional Instructions

Prepared: June 4, 2014

Congratulations—you're one step closer to submission!

This report summarizes the work that has been done to bring your manuscript into compliance with your targeted journal's formatting requirements, and it describes any further changes that you will need to make before submitting your manuscript to your specified journal. Please review this document and the marginal comments in your manuscript carefully. If you have any questions, please contact us at support@aje.com.

Title Page

Please complete your title page according to our comments in the manuscript prior to submission.

Abstract

The journal limits the Conclusion section of the abstract to no more than 26 words. Your Conclusion section is currently 72 words. Please reduce the word count prior to submission.

Citations and References

An EndNote output style (.ens) designed specifically for your target journal according to its guidelines has been used to reformat your citations and bibliography.

Your document has been protected to prevent your reference management software from automatically changing the format of your citations and bibliography. We suggest that you disable instant formatting in your reference management software before you open your document(s) and remove protection. To remove protection and make your document(s) editable, simply try to type in your document, and then click the "Stop protection" button that appears in the rectangular frame on the right side of the window. Now, you should be able to edit your document as usual.

The journal requires that the first author for each reference be presented in bold text. This cannot be done using EndNote, and has therefore been added for you manually. Please note that if you use EndNote to update your references, the bold formatting will be lost and must be added back manually.

Figures and Figure Legends

Per the journal guidelines, all the figures have been placed at the end of the manuscript, each on a separate page. Please replace these figures with the new figures prepared for you by our Figure Formatting service prior to submission.

Per the journal guidelines, the figure legends have been placed on a separate page at the end of the manuscript.
