

Dear editor and reviewers:

Thanks a lot for your kindly help of this paper, and we thanks all the reviewers had raised good questions about our work, which can help us make our manuscript better. The revised manuscript was carefully reviewed by another native speaker from the AJE, and lots of spell and grammar mistakes, which were corrected in the revised manuscript marked with red words. The following is our response to the question of reviewers:

Response to Reviewer #1:

I had the opportunity to review a paper “Repeated pancreatitis-induced splenic vein thrombosis leads to intractable gastric variceal bleeding: A case report and systemic review”, and I found very interesting. There is no problem to publish the manuscript.

Answer: Thanks a lot for the well comment to our manuscript.

Response to Reviewer #2:

The manuscript “Repeated pancreatitis-induced splenic vein thrombosis leads to intractable gastric variceal bleeding: A case report and systemic review” is focused on a very interesting topic. However there are, in my opinion, several limitation in this study. 1) In the title is mentioned a systematic review that, in my view was not performed. The authors should go through the literature performing a review of the cases of splenic vein thrombosis after pancreatitis, the sequels of portal vein thrombosis and the treatment. Tables including the paper analyzed, the data suggested and the bibliography should be definitely included as suggested by the guidelines for systematic review. Then the authors can also add the case report.

Answer: Thanks a lot for this good suggestion! We've go through the literature performing a review of the cases of splenic vein thrombosis after pancreatitis, and tables including the paper analyzed.

2) The language can be improved.

Answer: The revised manuscript was carefully reviewed by another native speaker from the AJE, and lots of spell and grammar mistakes

That's a good suggestion for the wording "systematic review" should be changed to "review", and we've revised in the accessory. We request the final publication that before the November, because of the doctor degree application. Thanks a lot for your kindly help!
