Revision has been made according to the suggestions of the reviewer

- "Interesting case report describing the dermoscopic features in a case of atypical fibroxanthoma. You could stress on the fact that the dermoscopic features are quite non-specific and depend a lot on the stage of the lesion You could describe the histopathology in the figure legend. There is one more recent reference which you can add to the discussion -Dermatol Pract Concept. 2014 Apr; 4(2): 77-80."
  - We now have insert a sentence in the discussion stressing the fact that the dermoscopic features are quite non-specific and depend a lot on the stage of the lesion.
  - Moreover the suggested reference was added
- This is a nice case report illustrating an easily recognizable dermoscopic pattern ("blue amber pattern") which could represent an additional feature in differential diagnosis between Atypical fibroxanthoma and other skin neoplasms.
  - We thank the reviewer for accepting our manuscript
