Dear Editor,

Thanks for the time spent in reviewing this article and for all the valuable inputs. We did not aim at doing a systematic review because of the lack of randomized controlled trials or even big retrospective studies, that could give us information and numbers to work with. Anyway in the last paragraph of the introduction, we describe the terms that were used in the search.

Best regards.

Dear Editor,

Thanks for the time spent in reviewing this article and for all the valuable inputs. We believe that the existence of so many names for the same disease comes from the lack of standardization in classification of this disease. The literature is scarce on good quality studies. Although the term "necrotizing enterocolitis" has been applied to describe the neutropenic enterocolitis, we believe that the disease described in newborn is a complete different illness that comes out of the scope of this review (Please see the first paragraph of the introduction).

Best regards.
