

Proofread and Edited Document

Von: "Cambridge Proofreading" <info@cambridgeproofreading.com>
An: "Christoph Rademacher" <christophra@gmx.de>
Datum: 14.06.2016 02:40:02

Cambridge Proofreading

Dear Christoph,

Please find your edited document here. (Link will expire within 21 days.)

As you will see, all of the editor's changes are tracked so that you can see where the improvements have been made. The most convenient way of removing the tracking notes is to: 1) select the Review tab 2) select Accept Changes 3) click Accept All.

MS Word 2013:

The Track Changes highlighting will not show automatically in MS Word 2013. To show changes:

- Select the Review tab.
- Click on the dropdown box that currently says Simple Markup.
- Select All Markup from the options.

The editor commented:

Your document was very intriguing and it was very fun to edit! Your document was written and edited very well, but I did find a couple ways that it could be improved. The tracked file shows the edits that were done to the manuscript and comments explaining the edits. I encourage you look at the file to understand the edits and improve your grammar for future documents. There were some unusual in-text reference styles and inconsistencies in the document. Please determine how you want to present your references while consulting your publishing body and be consistent throughout the document. Again, it was written very well and I wish you the best luck with your research!

Keep up the great work!

Thank you very much for using Cambridge Proofreading.

Any questions, please do ask.

George Wilson
Editing Manager
Cambridge Proofreading

Tel: (+1) 844-332-5040
Skype: CamProofreading
Email: info@cambridgeproofreading.com

View in your browser