

Patients were not required to give informed consent to the study because the analysis used clinical medical records data that were obtained after each patient agreed to treatment by written consent.