Do you want to participate in a clinical study as a healthy control? - Risk or benefit?

Giessen Hanna, Nebiker Christian, Bruehlmeier Matthias, Spreitzer Stefan, Mueller Beat, Schuetz Philipp

Abstract

A healthy woman volunteered to participate as "healthy control" in a study. An increased level of procalcitonin (PCT) was detected and remained elevated on follow-up measurements. As calcitonin levels were elevated as well, thyroid ultrasound was performed which revealed nodes in both thyroid lobes, one of them showing metabolic activity in PET-CT scan. To exclude a malignant thyroid cancer despite the negative findings in a fine needle aspiration the patient underwent a thyroidectomy
