COMMENT-1

The manuscript as a whole suffers from poor style and frequent grammatical errors. The manuscript does not read well and needs to be rewritten with particular consideration to clarity and flow of ideas. Authors are encouraged to seek the help of an English-speaking colleague.

<Answer>

Thank you for your precise comment.

I feel a lack of English grammar and I got the proofreading from the English-speaking experts. They provided detailed feedback on my paper's organization and grammar.

I added the language certificate letter by professional English language editing company - 'American Journal Experts'.

I'll try to improve my English grammar.

COMMENT-2

Kim and coauthors present here a case report focusing on a complication of treatment of a gastric bleeding ulcer with adrenaline.

This is documented with endoscopic pictures and followed by some comments on this procedure.

<Answer>

I reported a rare case focusing on a complication of gastric epinephrine injection. Therefore, I think endoscopic picture and comment of this procedure are very important. According to your comment, I tried to make up for the poor expression of my comment and received the proofreading from the English-experts.
