Social processes underlying acculturation: a study of ...

<https://www.ncbi.nlm.nih.gov/pmc/articles/PMC2849116>

Alcoholic beverages are sold in many locations in Latin American countries as a household staple; underage youth were able to purchase alcohol for their parents if needed. It is worthy to note that many participants believed their countries did not have laws governing alcohol consumption (e.g., drinking age), or if they existed, were not enforced.

Highlights First study to explore the relationship between mortality and public holidays in a Latin American context (Morelos, Mexico). Incorporates quantitative and qualitative methods within the framework of cultural epidemiology. Suggests that Mexican cultural and religious beliefs guide the interpretation of death as a 'beautiful' process.
