SPECIFIC COMMENTS TO AUTHORS

The study deals with an interesting a case of mucinous adenocarcinoma associated with chronic hidradenitis. It is a condition that is difficult to diagnose, and the surgeon must be aware of this in cases of suppurative hidradenitis with long-term follow-up. The manuscript is well written, and I have some comments to make. The authors should discuss about the possibility of the immunohistochemistry tests also identify apocrine gland's epithelium. That aspect could explain the positive tests they found and justify the hypothesis of hidradenitis origin of the neoplasia. The “acknowledgement” section was left empty, without anything written. The figures and tables are informative and aesthetically pleasing. It would be very interesting if the authors would provide a schematic figure with the steps for the V-Y flap operation. Overall, the manuscript presents sufficient quality to be published in this journal.

SPECIFIC COMMENTS TO AUTHORS

The authors presented a very rare and interesting case, which reminds the importance of accurate diagnosis. 1. The incisal margin should be specified in the description of the second surgery. How to make sure a complete resection? 2. The patient remained free of recurrence for 24 months, so a follow-up picture to show the final appearance is recommended.
