Abstract

BACKGROUND

The occurrence of a diaphragmatic hernia during the third trimester of pregnancy is rare, to our knowledge, there has only been a single case report related to congenital Bochdalek hernia complicated with mild acute pancreatitis in pregnancy. Nonspecific symptoms and lack of experience owing to its rarity make the diagnosis of this Bochdalek hernia in an adult: two case reports and a ...

<https://surgicalcasereports.springeropen.com/...> ▾

Apr 17, 2020 · Bochdalek hernia in an adult is very rare and often needs an immediate surgical repair for the herniation. Although its etiology and surgical techniques have frequently been reported, perioperative complications, especially cardiopulmonary problems, remain unknown. We reported two adults with Bochdalek hernia and reviewed the published literatures with a focus on these issues.
