SPECIFIC COMMENTS TO AUTHORS

This case report of primary pulmonary synovial sarcoma (PPSS) described that the primary site presented a nodule with peripheral calcification on computed tomography, and metastatic lesions (kidney and chest wall) showed distinctive manifestations of “fast forward and fast retreat” pattern on contrast enhanced ultrasound (CEUS). The latter findings will be useful for clinicians to plan how to treat and monitor this rare but aggressive disease. Can the CEUS be used to distinguish between metastases of PPSS and renal cell carcinomas? I hope this issue will be mentioned in the discussion.
