

I am very grateful to the reviewers for their suggestion and I have read the relevant articles. First of all, regarding the role of catecholamine in the sympathetic nervous system and the possible signal transduction mechanisms that were lacking in this study, I read the references provided by the reviewer and added them to the main text. Secondly, regarding the recent research progress, I have carefully read the relevant literature and summarized it in the revised article. Thanks again for the help of the reviewers.