Response to the referee's comments

Reviewer #1 (Comments to the Author (Required)):

The authors reported a family with Birt-Hogg-Dube syndrome. The proband were representative of the syndrome based on the clinical history with spontaneous pneumothorax and family history. Further genetic testing confirmed the major variant of FLCN in this family. The case report is important to enlighten this syndrome so that it should be accepted.

A very elaborate, detailed, and well written manuscript. Yet, for the sake of the readers, is there perhaps any information about the epidemiology regarding the incidence and also prognosis of this disease?

Response to Reviewer #2:

Thanks for your generous comments. According to your advice, we amended the relevant part in manuscript. All of your questions were answered one-by-one.

1. The incidence of this disease has been described in the [INTRODUCTION] section of the article, and references [1] have been supplemented.
2. The prognosis of this disease is explained at the end of the article, with the reference [14] supplemented.

Thank you and all the reviewers for the kind advice again. If you have any questions, please contact us without hesitate.
