Abstract

Inflammatory bowel disease, encompassing Crohn's disease (CD) and ulcerative colitis (UC), are chronic immune-mediated inflammatory bowel diseases (IBD) that primarily affect the gastrointestinal tract with periods of activity and remission. Large body of evidence exist to strengthen the prognostic role of endoscopic evaluation for both disease activity and severity and it remains the gold standard for the assessment of mucosal healing. Mucosal healing has been associated with improved clinical outcomes with reduced relapse rates and decreased hospitalizations. IBD-related
