To whom it may concern:

This is to certify that the manuscript entitled “Fecal microbiota transplantation (FMT) for irritable bowel syndrome (IBS): an intervention for the 21st century.” was edited by native-English-speaking scientists working for English Science Editing. I personally guarantee that the quality of English in the parts of the manuscript that we edited is indistinguishable from that expected of an expert native English speaker.

This certification applies only to the version of the manuscript that I returned to Professor Magdy El-Salhy on January 18, 2021 once the additional changes/clarifications we have recommended have been made. This certification does not apply to the References section of figures (but it includes their legends), since those parts of the manuscript was not included in our editing, nor does it apply to any subsequent changes that may have been made to the manuscript prior to its submission for publication.

Please contact me if you have any concerns about the use of English in the manuscript.

Yours faithfully,

P.J. Kolston, PhD
