SPECIFIC COMMENTS TO AUTHORS

The manuscript is well, concisely and coherently organized and presented. Their style, language and grammar seems to be accurate and appropriate. PVD is a common condition that happens twice in a lifetime (one for each eye) It is important to draw attention to a this very frequent process and that is important since PVD is the main trigger of regmatogenous retinal detachment, and vitreoretinal interface problems are the first cause of pathologies as frequent as epiretinal membranes and macular holes
