SPECIFIC COMMENTS TO AUTHORS

- bacterial name and species should be stated in italics. - Abstracts should be contains of case presentation, treatment course as well as clinical outcome, thus, it can be re-writes more interesting. - Core tip was missed!! - the case presentation section has not structured as journal guidelines. - Bibliography of the manuscript need to be updated. - where is the novelty of this manuscript!!; Tuberculous pericarditis is common and i have not seen any novelty or novel clinical teach point in the present case.

SPECIFIC COMMENTS TO AUTHORS

The case is well written and I have no major concerns. A couple of observations: 1. Provide more references relating to the prevalence of TB pericarditis in the developing countries and in Cambodia also 2. How does this case study add something new to the subject, if the condition has high prevalence, and is managed with a standard protocol or treatment guideline? Justify the rationale of publishing this case report in terms of any novelty in the management, or unique findings not previously documented in the literature.
