Specific Comments to Authors: We recently operated on a patient unilaterally due to bilateral bullae and recurrent pneumothorax due to COVID-19 disease. These cases are rare and their publication will contribute to the literature. Congratulations to the authors.

We are especially grateful to the reviewers for their affirmation of our report.

(1) Science editor:

The study was a case report of bullectomy treat patient with pulmonary vesicle related COVID-19. They found that COVID-19 patient with pulmonary vesicles who underwent bullectomy showed higher rate of infections, fewer platelets, more neutrophils and fewer lymphocytes than normal range. The author points out that bullae resection is not a good treatment based on the extensive destruction of lung tissue by COVID-19. This report has important guiding significance for improving the treatment effect of COVID-19 pneumonia, especially for severe patients with vesicles.
