SPECIFIC COMMENTS TO AUTHORS

This review interestingly reviews to telemedicine applied to telenutrition. Some suggestions to implement the completeness of the work. Under 2. 2. Transition to Telemedicine and Telenutrition in Inflammatory Bowel Disease I would add some literature notes to better contextualize the impact of COVID-19 on IBD. Some work has highlighted how therapeutic adherence has been undermined and is an additional issue to examine in both the medical and nutritional settings. I would therefore recommend a closer look at some of the work in this regard (PMID: 35973931). In addition, I would add a mention to the fact that, in COVID-19, it was reported that even patients with controlled disease activity experienced psychological distress (PMID: 35346015) to stigmatize the need for remote telemedicine/telenutrition follow-up of patients with IBD. It could probably also be useful to recommend monitoring the, thus, psychological dimension with various questionnaires already used in IBD (PMID: 2748771, 3204199), and it would also be useful to discuss the impact that psychology has on nutrition. Otherwise, the review is well written and thorough. I therefore recommend supplementing it with citations and discussion of them in the paper. Good work.
