

The text is well written and is good to read and understand. In short, the authors described a case of Mycosis fungoides with generalized erythroderma. The prognostic for this disease is poor. In the end, they only attempt to treat with methotrexate, but without success. Although the case report merits publication due to the strategy to reach the diagnostic, such as applying 18F-FDG PET/CT, real benefits for the patients are quite limited, since this is a difficult to treat disease combination.

Response:

Hello teacher, I have completed the article revision as required, thank you for your valuable guidance.