

Since there were eleven patients in our study, statistically significant p values were not investigated between groups.

The data is about averages and standard deviations and there was no need for any statistical staff support in this regard.

Our study is a cross-sectional study that allows rapid data calculation and is an article in which we present our retrospective clinical observations.