Food allergy in irritable bowel syndrome: the case of non-celiac wheat sensitivity

Pasquale Mansueto, Alberto D'Aleazzo, Aurelio Scudita, Antonio Carruocci

Abstract

Irritable bowel syndrome (IBS) is one of the most common gastrointestinal disorders, having a prevalence of 12-30% in the general population. Most patients with IBS attribute their symptoms to adverse food reactions. We review the role of diet in the pathogenesis of IBS and the importance of dietary factors in the management of these patients. The
