Lung cancer screening - computed tomography or chest radiographs?

Edwin JR van Beek, Saeed Mirsadraee, John T Murchison

Abstract

Worldwide, <sup>11</sup>lung cancer is the leading cause of mortality due to malignancy. The vast majority of cases <sup>9</sup>of lung cancer are smoking related and the most effective way of reducing lung cancer incidence and mortality is by smoking cessation. In the western world, smoking cessation policies have met with limited success. The other major means of reducing lung cancer deaths is to diagnose cases at an earlier more treatable stage employing screening programmes using chest radiographs or low dose computed tomography. In
