Abstract

AIM: To evaluate the presence of the so called 'statin escape' phenomenon among hyperlipidemic subjects attending a lipid clinic.

METHODS: This was a retrospective analysis of 1240 hyperlipidemic individuals followed-up for ≥3 years. We excluded those individuals meeting one of the following criteria: use of statin therapy at baseline visit, discontinuation of statin treatment at most recent visit, change in statin treatment during follow-up and poor compliance to treatment. Statin escape phenomenon was defined as an increase in low-density lipoprotein cholesterol (LDL-C) levels at the most recent visit by >10% compared with the value at 6 months following initiation of statin treatment.
