Identifying and managing naevus dysmorphia in clinical practice

Andrew G Affleck, Emma Wray, Zoë Chouliara

Abstract

Naevus dysmorphia is a form of appearance concern / body image dissatisfaction, which describes a preoccupation with the appearance of a clinically small melanocytic naevus. The naevus is perceived by the patient to be disfiguring. Such perception leads to maladaptive behaviours and is often associated with low mood, as well as high levels of anxiety and social avoidance. Affected individuals form a diverse group. However,
