Association of autoimmune hepatitis type 1 in a child with Evans syndrome

Chaowapong Jarasvaraparn, Hamayun Imran, Abdul Siddiqui, Felicia Wilson, David A GremseAbstract

Autoimmune hepatitis is a progressive liver disease that is often associated with extrahepatic autoimmune disorders. Evans syndrome is a rare autoimmune disorder, which is characterized by immune thrombocytopenia and autoimmune hemolytic anemia. Association of autoimmune hepatitis with Evans syndrome is rare, especially in children. We report a 3-year-old-female with a past medical history of Evans syndrome who presented with jaundice and significant
