Hair thread tourniquet syndrome in a toe of an 18 months old girl

Jesse WP Kuiper, Niels de Korte

1

Abstract

Hair thread tourniquet syndrome is rare and usually affects little children. If the tourniquet is not incised, the affected body part becomes ischemic or even necrotic.

A 18 months old girl was seen in the emergency ward with a painful, red and swollen third toe of the left foot. The toe appeared to be strangulated with a
