Lymphocytic esophagitis: Report of three cases and review of the literature

Bilel Jideh, Andrew Keegan, Martin Weltman

Abstract

Lymphocytic esophagitis (LyE) is a rare condition characterised histologically by high numbers of esophageal intraepithelial lymphocytes without significant granulocytes infiltration, in addition to intercellular edema ('spongiosis'). The clinical significance and natural history of LyE is poorly defined although dysphagia is reportedly the most common symptom. Endoscopic features range from normal
