Rapunzel syndrome is not just a mere surgical problem: A case report and review of current management

Obinna Obinwa, David Cooper, Faraz Khan, James M O'Riordan

Abstract

Recurrent Rapunzel Syndrome (RRS) is a rare clinical presentation with fewer than six cases reported in the PUBMED literature. A report of RRS and literature review is presented. A 25-year-old female was admitted to hospital with a 4-week history of epigastric pain and swelling. She had a known history of trichophagia with a previous admission for Rapunzel syndrome
