Ileocolic intussusception caused by a lipoma in an adult

Dong Eun Lee, Jong Kun Kim, Jae Young Choe

Abstract

Intussusception is rarely observed in adults. Adult cases account for only 5% of all cases of intussusceptions and almost 1%-5% of bowel obstruction cases. The etiology, presentation and management of intussusception in adults are different from those in children. The clinical presentation in adults often includes nonspecific signs and symptoms, thereby complicating differential diagnosis from other causes of
