Case studies in psychotherapy training using Austria as an example

Ela Neidhart, Henriette Löffler-Stastka

Abstract

BACKGROUND

Case studies (CS) are relevant for the development of theoretical and practical competencies in psychotherapy. Despite rapid progress in the development of methods and principles for establishing CS in the last three decades, research

Case studies are in-depth investigations of a single person, group, event or community. Typically, data are gathered from a variety of sources and by using several different methods (e.g. observations & interviews). The research may also continue for an extended period of time, so processes and developments can be studied as they happen. The case study method often involves simply observing what happens to, or reconstructing the case history of a single participant or group of individuals (such ...
