Retrospective Study

Low yield of routine duodenal biopsies for evaluation of abdominal pain

Sivrling M Dufier, Wilson T Kwang, Denise Kalmaz, Thomas J Savides

Abstract

AIME: To determine the yield of biopsying normal duodenal mucosa for investigation of abdominal pain.

METHODS: This is a retrospective chart review of consecutive patients who underwent esophagogastroduodenoscopy (EGD) with duodenal biopsies of normal appearing duodenal mucosa for an indication that included abdominal pain. All the patients in this study were identified from an electronic endoscopy database at a single academic medical center and had an EGD with duodenal biopsies performed over a 4-year period. New diagnoses that were made as a direct result of duodenal biopsies were identified. All duodenal pathology reports and endoscopy records were reviewed for indications to perform the examination as well as the findings; all the medical records were reviewed. Exclusion criteria included age less than 18 years, duodenal mass, nodule, or polyp, endoscopic duodenitis, duodenal scarring, known celiac disease, positive celiac
