Accuracy of abdominal auscultation for bowel obstruction

Birger Michael Bruun, Bo Rind, Thomas Kirkegaard, Tyge Norderhoff

Abstract

AIM: To investigate the accuracy and inter-observer variation of bowel sound assessment in patient with clinically suspected bowel obstruction.

METHODS: Bowel sounds were recorded in patients with suspected bowel obstruction using a Littmann® Electronic Stethoscope. The recordings were processed to yield 25-second sound sequences in random order on pcs. Observers, recruited from doctors within the department, classified the sound sequences as either normal or pathological. The reference tests for bowel obstruction were intraoperative and endoscopic findings and
