New devices and techniques for endoscopic closure of gastrointestinal perforations

Yue Li, Jian-Hua Wu, Yan Meng, Qiang Zhang, Wei Gong, Si-De Liu

Abstract

Gastrointestinal perforations, as an emergency needs to be managed quickly, possess a high morbidity and mortality. Treatments that were applied to close the perforations for the patients are usually different due to various situations, from surgery to endoscopic therapy. Nowadays, with the development of new devices and techniques, endoscopic therapy is becoming more and more conventional and popular. However, there were
