Myeloid sarcoma presenting as a colon polyp and harbinger of chronic myelogenous leukemia

Robert Rogers, Mark Ettel, Margaret Cho, Alexander Chan, Xiao-Jun Wu, Antonio G Neto

Abstract

Myeloid sarcoma, also known as granulocytic sarcoma or chloroma is an unusual accumulation of malignant myeloid precursor cells in an extramedullary site, which disrupts the normal architecture of the involved tissue. It is known to occur more commonly in patients with acute myelogenous leukemia and less commonly in those with myelodysplastic syndrome and myeloproliferative neoplasm, such as chronic
